

Masimo Semiconductor FAQs

- 1. Has Spire Semiconductor been acquired by another company?
 - a. The assets of Spire Semiconductor were acquired by Masimo Semiconductor, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Masimo Corporation, on March 9, 2012.

- 2. What kind of company is Masimo?
 - a. Masimo is a medical device company based in California, focused on noninvasive patient monitoring. The company is the market leader in pulse oximetry and improving patient safety by continuously measuring vital signs such as blood oxygen, pulse rate and respiration rate.

- 3. Will all the same people still be working at Masimo Semiconductor?
 - a. Yes, Masimo intends to retain all current staff, including the senior leadership team.

- 4. Is the business moving to a new location?
 - a. No, the business will remain in Hudson, New Hampshire.

- 5. Will there be any change in the ordering process?
 - a. No, the ordering process will not change.

- 6. Is there a change in the mailing address for submitting payments for POs?
 - a. No, there is no change in address, but checks should now be made payable to Masimo Semiconductor.

- 7. Is there any change in payment terms ?
 - a. No, Masimo Semiconductor will honor the same terms previously agreed to by Spire Semiconductor.

- 8. Will orders take longer to fulfill under the new owners ?

- a. No, the semiconductor facility has more than enough capacity to continue fulfilling all orders in a timely fashion.